

Summary

This is just an incomplete summation of my experiences and opinion of what the legal, political, and psychological professions have become: corrupt.

They all should put the United States Constitutional rights and protections of their clients above any other consideration. But Constitutional rights and protections are losing out to money, power, and politics in the United States.

There are no longer impartial judges in the United States as they are appointed and elected by political considerations.

Bad precedence is destroying Constitutional rights and protections: no federal court has the courage to overturn bad laws or bad lower court decisions.

Nobody is holding public officials accountable because the majority of citizens and taxpayers themselves do not want to be held accountable, a laissez faire attitude as long as their behavior does not bother me; an apathy and indifference that is destroying democracy by neglect.

Freedom, justice, and liberty are not sustainable by a complaisance or compromise.

Historically, dissents who have the courage to voice the truth are persecuted, and the Whistle-blower Protection laws in the United States are being ignored, especially when the whistle-blowers are poor.

The public defenders in the United States are a scam. The appeal process is a scam. Both are ignoring the constitutional rights and protections of the accused. Both are costing taxpayers billions of dollars to imprison persons who are convicted because they were too poor to hire a decent defense counsel.

Both the Roman Empire and pre-Hitler Germany had governments and courts that ignored their national constitutions. The United States is following the same death spiral.

Very Respectfully,

Donald A. Newell, Jr.
